EVERYTHING READY FOR BIG HORTICULTURAL TOUR

Favorable weather is the only thing necessary now to make the 4-County Horticultural Tour to the Graham Experiment Station a big success. Fruit growers in all parts of the county will make the trip and are also actively boosting to secure a large attendance of their neighbors. Following is the schedule for the day:

TUESDAY, AUG. 12 (fast time)
8:00 a. m.—Leave Court House, Muskegon.
9:00 a. m.—Join group from eastern part of Muskegon county at Cassin corner. Leave for Grand Rapids.

10:00 a. m.—Arrive at Graham Station. Divide into parties for inspection of grounds.

12:00 noon—Lunch. Each bring their own lunch. The Station will furnish coffee.
1:00 p. m.—Resume tour of grounds. This is followed by a short program with men from the Horticultural department of the Michigan Agricultural College as the principal speakers. These men will also act as guides for the visitors and will explain the experiments and work being carried on with the different plots.

Reports from the Station indicate that many of the experimental plots, new in the third year of work, are showing some interesting results. This proof of methods by actual test should prove exceedingly valuable to the visiting fruit men.

Two additional men have been added to the Booster's committee, which is hard at work to secure a large delegation from Muskegon county. The two new names are Clarence Alberts of Ravenna and L. J. Porter of Norton township.

Chief Owasippe Legend

Told by Local Man and Re-written by Eagle Scout McCoy

Saturday, July 26, the three camps which compose the Owasippe Scout Camps, held a joint camp-fire at Camp McDonald. The boys, under the direction and accompanied by Chief Whirling Thunder, enacted the story of Chief Owasippe, after whom the camps are named. For the benefit of those who are new in these parts of the country, the writer is going to repeat, as near as his memory will permit, the exact story as told by Mr. Reed, one of the real old-timers, who knew this country when it was young, to the boys before the story was enacted. The Boy Scouts herein wish to extend their appreciation to Mr. Reed and to all those who have been real friends to them.

"For a long time, the name 'Dead-man's Rollway' had been a mystery of the country. Not until 1887 was it even those who had spent all or nearly all of their life in this part the mystery solved to the entire satisfaction of those who made this part of the country their permanent home.

At this time several young boys were spending the day fishing off the point, which was a favorite fishing grounds, when they discovered the skeleton of a canoe. They returned to Whitehall, and reported their find to the people. A group of citizens, of which I was one, went up the river and after search found the skeletons of two canoes, and the skeletons of two men, along with a copper kettle, arrow heads, and beads. I had some of the beads and arrow heads until they were lost in the Whitehall Fire."

Mr. Reed then went on to tell the story of Owasippe, and his two sons, "In this locality there lived an old Indian Chief, Owasippe IV or V, by name, who had two sons, the apple of his eye, and the favorites of the tribe. They were known as Big Bear and Little Bear, being named after the constellations in our heavens. Now as you probably know, it was the custom of the Indians to send their young men upon an ordeal, when they reached the age of manhood. So Chief Owasippe called his tribe together for a farewell council fire. The sons danced for the people, and the tribesmen in their turn, honored their young princes. The old Chief gave them good advice, and warned them of their dangers, whereupon the boys left for their journey down White River, into White Lake and into Lake Michigan. They were to return upon the second night.

"On the afternoon of the second day, a dreadful storm broke forth, one of the most severe the country has ever known, and the sons did not return at the appointed time. The Chief became anxious. Every morning and evening, he went to the crest of the hill and watched the land of the setting sun. It became later, that he spent all of his time upon the lookout, and one day his people found him dead at his post under a pine, looking out over the country he had ruled.

"The sons never returned, although the Chief had sent out scouts and runners, and what became of them was never known until the people found the canoes at Burying Ground Point.

"The supplement was that the sons were returning and were just off of the Point, when the storm overtook them. They landed and turning their canoes over for shelter, went to sleep underneath. During the night a landslide buried the princes, and they were never heard of until the river washed the sand from off their resting places. The Chief was buried at his Lookout, between two pines, as was the Indian custom.

It has also been stated that if provisions for manual training were incorporated in the bonding issue, several more would vote in favor of the proposal. Manual training is a worthy study, but that course can be installed in the Whitehall school, without the addition of a building and bond issue, whereas a gymnasium can not. As soon as manual training is desired by enough students to make the course worth installation, undoubtedly they will receive it. Do you know that practically one-half of the entire basement of the school house is unused, and that the rooms there would make excellent manual training work rooms, while the same rooms could not be used under any circumstance for gymnasium purpose.

Whitehall is known as an ultra-progressive town, but we noted the other day in The Oceana Herald, of Shelby, a remark that our school was not in keeping with that same display of progressiveness exhibited by the village. Let's all vote for a gymnasium for Whitehall High, next Monday evening, at the high school auditorium, between the hours of 6:30 and 8:30 o'clock, and defy the allegation above made.

All plans are now in full working force for the Ninth Annual Wabaningo Jinks. The show will be given at the Club House on August 22 and 23. Rehearsals have been going every morning and afternoon since last Monday and from the size of the crowd that has been in attendance, and the interest shown, it looks as though this Jinks would at least equal past performances.

Do Not Fail to Vote Yes

School Bond Election Monday

Polls Open 6:30 to 8:30

Voters of School District No. One, Whitehall township will next Monday night cast their decision, whether or not Whitehall schools shall have a gymnasium. If the vote is favorable our school will advance another step in progression, while if the vote is negative our school will remain in the same rut which has characterized it for many a year. A school, like any other institution, must improve upon its facilities in order to better itself and survive competition. Lack of improvements and advantages, always causes the retardation of progress to any institution. Schools without improvements, at least once in a while, cannot advance, and if year after year no improvements are made—as has been the case of Whitehall's educational institution—the school must suffer as the result.

Gymnasiums have proven a necessity to every high school and such a building offers numerous advantages to the school as well as to the public. It is educational as well as recreational and offers to Whitehall a building, which the entire community may enjoy. Why is it then, if gymnasiums are not practical and even necessary, that every school located in a community of 400 inhabitants or more, situated all around us, have large and well equipped gymnasium buildings? If it is good for others, it must be good for ourselves.

Some voters in this township are opposed to the proposition, simply because, they themselves did not have such advantages. They must remember that time changeth all things, and that which was good enough for them is not good enough for the present generation. Others claim they are not interested because they have no children attending school. Such a statement would be highly un-American, for all people should be interested in development and education of the young of today, who are to rule this country in the future. Give them the best educational facilities obtainable and future prosperity of this country is assured.

Still others remark, "The taxes will be so much higher." Let us inform you that the tax necessary to provide the school district of Whitehall with a gymnasium, will only amount to $1.50 per year on a $1,000 valuation. Rather a small amount of money isn't it, less than 1/2 a cent per day, per year.

It has also been stated that if provisions for manual training were incorporated in the bonding issue, several more would vote in favor of the proposal. Manual training is a worthy study, but that course can be installed in the Whitehall school, without the addition of a building and bond issue, whereas a gymnasium can not. As soon as manual training is desired by enough students to make the course worth installation, undoubtedly they will receive it. Do you know that practically one-half of the entire basement of the school house is unused, and that the rooms there would make excellent manual training work rooms, while the same rooms could not be used under any circumstance for gymnasium purpose.

Time to Spray Again

The last brood of codling moth will soon appear. Spraying to protect apples against these worms, should be completed by August 9th. A telegram just received from R. H. Pettit, Professor of Entomology at the Michigan Agricultural College, gives the above warning which is being transmitted to the fruitgrowers of the county by Agricultural Agent Knopf.

Cages containing pupae of the codling moth are maintained in various parts of the state by the M. A. C. Entomology department. These are kept under observation and when the moths appear in any locality, warning is immediately sent to the fruitgrowers of that section. This allows the grower to spray thoroughly before the worms, representing the second brood of this pest, appear. As these worms enter the side of the apple, giving them the common name of "side worm," the fruit must be completely covered for efficient protection.

This service, which gives such timely warnings to the growers is worth thousands of dollars annually to the apple industry, and is a demonstration of the value of the Michigan Agricultural College and its Extension service, to the farmers of the state.

That Much-Touted Labor Vote

The active speaking campaign of the political parties will not start until after the candidates on the several tickets have been formally notified that they have been chosen by their conventions. After these notifications have taken place the country may look for numerous speakers to appear on the stump and present the claims of the parties for whom they speak.

While it is true that certain men claiming to represent organized labor have stated their preferences, it is a well-known fact that labor, that is, the body of men making up the rank and file of the different organizations, deeply resent the treatment labor received at the hands of the democratic convention when the Davis managers ruthlessly shoved Geo. L. Berry, leading democratic candidate for vice president, to one side for "Brother Charles" Bryan, despite the fact that Berry's friends had been told by the Davis adherents that he, Berry, would make a most acceptable running mate. Major Berry's slip in the face by the Davis folks has also caused the veterans of the world war to deeply resent the cruel and unnecessary treatment of one who served with distinction in the world war. The talk of labor being solid for the independent candidate, or any candidate, no one takes seriously. Labor, farmers, business men, clerks, or any other body of citizens, cannot be delivered by anyone to any candidate. American citizens cannot be bossed around like sheep. Labor, or any other body of citizens, cannot be fooled by beautiful phrases or by promises, which any thinking man knows cannot be fulfilled.

Fred Bernhardt, was called to a fatal demise, last Friday morning, as the result of serious injuries sustained, after being struck by an auto, near the White Lake Golf club house, late Thursday afternoon. He was taken to Hackley hospital, Muskegon, where he passed away. It has been stated that the accident was unavoidable. Mr. Bernhardt was born in Hessel Cassel, Germany, March 29, 1869 and at the time of death was 55 years, 4 months and 2 days of age.

Deceased came to this county at the age of 19 years, settling in Montague, where he was employed at the Staples & Covell mill for eight years. He was united in marriage to Miss Flora Miller on December 18, 1891, and to this union were born three children, all of whom survive him.

From Montague the family moved to Duluth, Minn., where they lived for three years, going from there to Otsego, and, after two years residence, they returned to Montague, purchased a farm and lived there for twenty years. Three years ago, they moved to Whitehall and have since made their residence in this village.

He was a member of the German Lutheran church in Montague for many years. Upright and conscientious in his dealings with fellowmen, he was well respected by all who knew him.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife; one son, Arthur of this village; two daughters, Mrs. Rose Cammon of Plymouth, Mich., and Miss Elsie of this village; two sisters, Mrs. Carl Kraft and Mrs. Jacob Schroeder of Hopkins, Mich.; two brothers, Chris Barnhardt of Hopkins and one, living in Germany.

The funeral services were held at the family residence at one o'clock and at the German Lutheran church, Montague, at two o'clock last Sunday afternoon, Rev. Schriefer officiating. Interment was made in Oakwood cemetery, Montague.

Those from out of town who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. G. N. Cammon and children of Plymouth, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Barnhardt and children and Mrs. Carl Kraft and son of Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Webber and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Burdick of Grand Rapids, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Schwartz of Conklin, and Mrs. G. Cultivation Is Very Important Feeding Roots of Plants Must Be Given Chance to Penetrate Soil.

All the fertilizer in the world without proper cultivation won't make a good garden. If a gardener expects to have a garden without cultivating early and often, he will be disappointed. It might as well give up at the start. Cultivation not only acts as a fertilizer, but saves fertilizer. It also saves water bills in dry weather.

The first object of cultivation is to secure tillth—that is a fine powdery condition of the soil so that when turned over it will fall apart easily and not separate into big, soggy lumps that need to be hammered to be broken. It is apparent that the small feeding roots of plants can penetrate and secure their food much more readily in a well-cultivated soil than in a heavy, lumpy, soggy one.

Cultivate Every Week. The garden should be gone over and cultivated once a week. The object is not only the destruction of weeds but the stirring of the soil about the plants. Cultivation should be done after a rain, or soon as the soil is moist and sticky to the touch. This would result only in a lumpy condition. Cultivation just before watering in dry times will also tend to make the soil lumpy. Cultivate after watering to keep the moisture in the ground. There is a right time to cultivate and it is to cultivate when the soil is moist and sticky to the touch. It will permit fine cultivation as soon after a rain or after watering as possible.

Cultivation helps to retain moisture in the soil by establishing a thin covering of thin-divided soil often called a dust mulch. This does not evaporate moisture as rapidly as a closely packed surface nor does it act as a sponge to draw up moisture from below as rapidly as does firm and unworked soil. Drains to the surface by capillary attraction the sun and winds soon take moisture away.

Cultivate more frequently in dry than wet weather. In hot weather the depth is sufficient. It will let air into the soil to keep it sweet and keep the moisture from escaping.

Mowing Best Time. The best time for mowing is early in the morning to conserve such moisture as has descended during the night and prepare for the sun and winds during the day.

The common hoe and the rake are excellent tools for this purpose in small gardens, but to make a good job of it in gardens of any size, a wheel hoe should be brought into action. You can go over the garden in a hurry and it can be cultivated twice or more times in the day without tiring you over it once with a hoe besides saving the weariness and backache that follow swinging a hoe for any length of time.

Bees Quite Valuable to Many Growers of Fruit. Commercial beekeepers of today move their bees many times each year to keep them busy making honey after the honey flow slows down in one location. To move a colony of bees there must be taken to their present cause them to create a great amount of heat. This excess heat will melt the comb and honey and will prevent the lid of the beehive and nothing will screen on top of the hive in place of the lid the bee man will give this should be moved on a cool night if possible.

In some fruit districts the fruit growers pay the beekeepers 50 cents a colony and the most sought after Chinese actress and the most sought after Chinese actress that ever came to China on the Pacific mail liner President Pierce. But accompanying the young lady was her husband, Tom Sum Tom, wealthy cotton grower of Mexicali, Cal.

Soy Beans Superior for Fattening Pigs

Crop Makes Good Hogging Combination With Corn.

High-yielding soy beans of such seed varieties as Manchu have an assured place in fall finishing of fattening pigs in the light of recent tests at Iowa State college. The leafy varieties, such as are used for hay or silage, are not so well adapted to hog raising as such crops as alfalfa, clover or rape. These tests indicate. Common farm practice, particularly in hogging down corn would support this view.

Soy beans make a strong combination with corn for hogging down if a mineral mixture, such as wood ashes (or limestone), and phosphate (or bone-meal) and salt is used. In the Iowa tests the pigs, weighing about 120 pounds at the start, averaged 130 pounds daily till they went to market, when fed corn, tankage and minerals (all self-fed) on pasture of Manchu soy beans; and they ate only 345 pounds for each 100 pounds gain in weight. The mineral mixture was made from 40 pounds spent bone black, 40 pounds limestone and 20 pounds salt.

Soy beans for forage did not prove as efficient as rape for pigs in these Iowa tests. Soy bean hay varieties made a poor economical showing. Soy beans do not have as long a growing period, are not as palatable and are more easily killed by frost as compared with clover, alfalfa or Dwarf Essex rape. These last-named forages fit in best for spring and mid-summer pastures, while a good seed variety of soy beans fills the need for fall finishing, balancing up the corn economically when minerals are fed in addition.

Silo Is Cheap and Best Means of Providing Feed. The silo is the best and cheapest means of providing succulent feed not only for winter, but as a supplement to short pastures during the long, dry summer months, according to the Missouri College of Agriculture, which states in a recent bulletin:

It is the cheapest farm building that can be erected. It will house feed at lower cost per pound than hay or roughs. It can be protected from the weather by barn roofs. It increases the producing capacity of the farm at least 10 per cent and will often increase its stock-carrying capacity 25 per cent.

It is the cheapest, and most effective method of storing. It is the cheapest place to store the corn crop, and, in fact, one of the silos crops, and the possibility it affords of utilizing all of the corn crop. An acre of corn can be placed in the silo at a cost not exceeding that of shocking, stacking, grinding and shreding and will produce more milk per acre than any other system of handling the crop.

It saves a third of the value of the corn crop that is otherwise largely wasted. It supplies feed at less labor and there is less waste of fodder by cows.

Cutworms Destroyed by Poisoning With Mixture. Cutworms in gardens can be destroyed by poisoning them with potassium cyanide. This material is prepared in small quantities for use by thoroughly mixing one ounce of paris green or white arsenic with one pound of bran. To this is added three ounces of syrup, one and one-half pints of water, and one-fourth of an ounce which is chopped up into small bits. As soon as the cutworms appear mash finely along the rows or around the plants to be protected. Since cutworms generally feed at night, the best results will be had by putting this material out in the evening.

Mow Pastures Regularly to Prevent Weed Growth. The pasture should be mowed regularly to prevent any weeds from going to seed. If a pasture is mowed regularly for two seasons, the majority of weeds will be eradicated. Mowing will not only prevent many weeds from going to seed, but it will reduce the low shade in the pasture and thus give the native grasses and legumes plenty of sunlight and a chance to grow, says S. L. Jeffords, forage crops specialist at Clemson college who insists that one mowing will not do and that getting thicker and better stands of the desirable grasses and legumes the mowing must be regular.

Spray Best for Tubers. In comparative experiments with Bordeaux mixture applied as a dust and as a spray for the control of late potato blight at the Rhode Island experiment station the yield from the dusted plants was only 70 per cent as much as from the plants which were sprayed.

Other Good Silo Crops. Corn is used more extensively for silage than any other crop and gives the best results where it can be grown most successfully. Barley, sorghum, alfalfa, clover, peas, beans, soy beans and Sudan grass are also good silage crops.

Diamonds of Malopo

CHAPTER XIII—Continued. By VICTOR ROUSSEAU. Copyright by W. G. Chapman.

As Winton followed the half a dozen men back for a moment, he saw that a straggling band was following him, which he had replaced in his pocket; but, reaching forward over his horse's neck, he drew out a small, white, round object, which he held up to the light. "It was a diamond," he said, "and it was a diamond."

The herd was not sheep, but antelope—springbok. It was in fact, one of the periodical migrations of these animals, of which Winton had heard. After a drought, when the hills fall, the animals are driven from their countless numbers in search of pasture, turning aside for nothing, passing even through populous cities. Herds of half a million have been encountered.

Winton saw the judge's hand lighted upon his revolver. But suddenly the weapon was lowered. The judge was looking into the old woman's face; his eyes seemed to become rigid as a plaster cast, and he noticed Weston no longer.

As he spoke, Sheila came out of one of the huts. She fixed her eyes on Winton in inquiry; he could see that she had told her the truth. She looked at Davis. She looked toward him.

CHAPTER XIV. The Up-rising. It was night. Winton had performed the last office for the dead woman. The triple tragedy had been too stunning for any interchange of words upon their return. At last, however, being nothing more to do, Winton was free to speak to Sheila about their future.

He had already gathered that Weston had told her everything concerning the tragedy. "I wish she would come," he said. "The man is a big girl by my side. There is the Amey."

Winton knew that the past twenty years had been completely obliterated from Judge Davis' memory. He had no notion that it was his own daughter who stood before him. If the old woman had kept quiet, they were gone now, perhaps through the shock of the meeting.

Winton was surprised that the judge had not been speaking to her about the tragedy. "I wish she would come," he said. "The man is a big girl by my side. There is the Amey."

UNIQUE KNITTED SUITS, CAPELET DISTINCTIVE MARK

Let the cloth tailor look to his field of costume design. It is the caplet or the equivalent is the special mark of distinction which fashionists bestow upon their handiwork frocks and wraps. That is not to say that the caplet is not a new and distinctive mark of distinction which fashionists bestow upon their handiwork frocks and wraps.

Unusual Type of Knitted Suit. The caplet is an appealing exponent. This swager mode is actually knit in bouclé effect, striking in its black-and-white combination. The distinctive three-quarter coat and intricately knitted Crusader pattern are features.

There is great advantage offered in the caplet in concealing ungloriously lines, and designers have recognized this, are applying their genius to developing these graceful attachments in every conceivable form.

Elizabeth Rhoads left on the boat last Monday evening. The LaFollette bunch of radicals based its "democracy." They would have you believe that they are opposed to bosses and boomism in all its phases, yet same if you see, a first class automobile, a fine home and a fine boat. For twenty years scarcely a Republican has dared to aspire to any office of importance unless he has had LaFollette's "O. K." And now, what LaFollette seeks a running mate of an "independent" ticket, notice how he names him. He couldn't even trust his hand picked national convention to select a vice-presidential candidate, but gets together a small group of personal followers, wholly of his own selection, and picks out a Montana Democrat. The news dispatches state "Senator Wheeler's nomination came as a surprise." The question of the preference, but whether he was really the first choice of all the conference will never be known.

Chiropractic For Appendicitis

Some learned scientists claim that the appendix is a useless organ. Does not seem queer that the Creator of the Universe—all of which is so perfect—should make a mistake by placing a useless appendix within the body of man? Appendicitis is inflammation of the appendix. The Chiropractor does not remove the appendix, but adjusts the cause. This has been proven by the many results which have been obtained by Chiropractic in cases of appendicitis. If you are threatened with appendicitis, will you pay your Chiropractor at once. Consultation and Spinal Analysis Free.

The Chew to Choose

YEARS of experience have shown you that BEECH-NUT Chewing Tobacco never stops to conquer.

We don't use factory trash. We don't buy up cigar pipe scrap. We don't pack dust and sweepings and stems. We don't cheapen BEECH-NUT Chewing Tobacco with indiscriminately purchased crops or bulk it by mixing in bitter, rancid, thick ground leaves.

BEECH-NUT is always a clean, pure, product, especially cut to just the right size and prepared through to sealing without one touch of hum an hands.

That's why it's still the biggest selling brand in the world. The truest friend 10c. ever had.
